RE: 2022/23 UMIA Faculty Research Grants Call for Proposals

Dear Colleagues,

We are pleased to share this year’s call for proposals for faculty research grants. UMIA funding programs for faculty are intended to encourage interdisciplinary research on the Americas, including Latin America, the Caribbean, immigrant populations of and in the region, and Miami as a hemispheric hub. Any full-time faculty member may apply, except UMIA faculty leads and associates, and faculty who have received funding for 2022-2023 for the same project from other UM or external sources. While our funds are limited, our goal is to support work that advances the wellbeing and quality of life of peoples in and across the Americas, especially research related to the Institute’s priorities: Climate Change, Gender, Migration, and Sustainable Health. We believe contributions to these goals may emerge from any part of the university, and are especially likely when diverse teams of scholars bring truly inter-disciplinary understandings and skillsets to bear on important questions, activities or problems. Scholars working in other areas, including cultural, social, or societal phenomena are encouraged to apply. Applications will be ranked by a diverse faculty committee considering standards of excellence that cut across fields. The best proposals will be selected, regardless of research area.

Please send your application in a single file PDF to MIA@miami.edu by Sunday, April 24, 2022, noting the category in which you are applying. Funds must be spent before May 15, 2023. Funds are available immediately after award. UMIA staff will explain disbursement and documentation requirements, which will follow university guidelines.

Please note, in order to broadly support faculty working on regional issues, faculty are eligible to receive funds in one category only and any researcher who has received a UMIA award for the last two consecutive years must sit out this competition. For working groups, that means they may not be a principle investigator or lead convener, but may be a group member.

Required outcomes that must be fulfilled by August 15, 2023 are: 1) an application for external funding to extend or adapt the project and 2) either a submission of a peer-reviewed article or the completion of a symposium or other academic event. All awardees will present the results of their project and/or their work-in-progress at UMIA in the Fall 2023.

The 2022-2023 cycle includes the following programs. However, UMIA reserves the right to award all funds in only one or two categories.

Inter-Disciplinary Research Groups. Deadline: April 24, 2022.

Funding leading to research publications and/or grant applications may apply for up to $10,000. Priority will be given to projects leading to publication in top-tier journals or publishing houses, which show promise of future external funding, and which are likely to reach important milestones during the grant period. Application is limited to those who have not received current year funding for the same project from other UM or external sources. Groups must have at least three members from two different academic units. Groups with members from different schools or colleges are especially encouraged. Please include a description of the project including: objectives, intellectual merit, contributions, research questions and methodology, intended publication outcomes and possible sources of future funding. A time-line with monthly outcomes, line-item budget and two-page CVs for group members should also be included. Previous grantees must list accomplishments based on previous awards. The application excluding the CVs, budget and accomplishments if applicable should not exceed 1500 words. The ability to complete the work following the submitted timeline will be considered during judging.

Individual Grants. Deadline April 24, 2022.

Seed grants for individual faculty who have not received current year funding for the same project from other UM or external sources are intended to promote initial development of medium- and long-term research initiatives. They may fund pilot data collection and analysis, scouting trips to archives, initial outputs such as a summary article or book prospectus, or other justified aspects of project development. Individuals may request up to $9000. Please include a description of the project including: objectives, intellectual merit, contributions, research questions and methodology, intended outcomes and possible sources of future funding. A time-line with monthly outcomes, line-item budget and two-page CV should also be included. Previous grantees must list accomplishments based on previous awards. The application excluding the CV, budget and accomplishments where applicable should not exceed 1500 words.

Manuscript Workshops. Deadline April 24, 2022.

UMIA will host up to two workshops for advanced book-length manuscripts on topics related to Latin America, the Caribbean or/and hemispheric Miami during the Fall 2022 to Spring 2023 academic semesters. The workshops will bring three senior scholars in the field, two of whom are external to UM, to intensely review, comment upon and discuss the manuscript. Faculty close to promotion will be given special consideration, but any full-time faculty member may apply. Manuscripts that have not already been accepted for publication will receive priority. Manuscripts intended for renowned academic presses are also prioritized. Workshop participants are selected by the UM faculty member and will receive a $500 stipend in return for a commitment to read and comment on the manuscript. External scholars’ travel expenses are paid and a workshop meal for participants will be provided. To apply, please submit your CV and a letter including the following components in approximately 500-750 words: Summarize the project; describe how close you are to completion and provide a timeline; describe your plans for publishing the manuscript; provide names of three participants (two external, one internal to UM) and two external alternates, including their institutions and one sentence about their relevant credentials; indicate the month you wish to hold the workshop considering the manuscript should be mailed to participants approximately one month prior.

We look forward to hearing from you.
